Headline:
Dry with warm sunny spells today. Much colder on Monday.

Today:
A cloudy start to Sunday, although it will be largely dry. The cloud will gradually thin and break to give way to some decent spells of sunshine by the afternoon. Feeling rather warm in the sunshine, with light winds. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Tonight:
After a fine and dry evening, it will turn increasingly cloudy from the north overnight, which will bring some outbreaks of rain by dawn. It will be turning breezier too. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Monday:
A band of cloud and outbreaks of rain will quickly move southwards during the morning. Turning drier and sunnier by the afternoon. Feeling much colder with a brisk northerly wind. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Staying rather cold and windy on Tuesday, with perhaps a few snow showers along the east coast. Cold and dry with sunny spells on Wednesday and Thursday. Widespread frosts overnight.
